State Congress: Election Results

Municipal Election Results

The Chiapas results have been touted by the Alliance forces as a victory for the opposition coalition strategy, and generally not discussed by the PRI. For now, we put Chiapas in the category of the “PRI losses” states. However, the problems of interpretation are complex given the history of multiple and changing electoral alliances (see pages 2 and 3). If ever there was a State where “all politics are local” it is Chiapas.

On balance, the PRI (plus the PVEM) has held its strong minority position in the local Congress with 18 of 40 seats.

The Alliance as a formal coalition now holds 20 of the 40 seats, with the PT maintaining another two. The Alliance strategy is arguably a success in electoral terms, and poses the question of what it can and will do in terms of governance, with a Governor who is a pluralist in approach without having a specific debt to this Alliance formation.

The Alliance as a formal coalition now holds nearly half (58) of the 118 municipalities. This is an historic shift since the days of near complete PRI domination through the 1990s, however the problem of the Alliance as governing institution is again posed.
